

Biography: The man with the strange eyes

Xaver Aarblick, his spy name was Mr X, was born at the 18/9/1849 in Dresden, Germany. His father was often in foreign countries and when he came back, he brought something with him from each country. In case of that, Mr X knows many about foreign countries, although he was very young. His mother was from Scotland, so he spoke two languages.

As a child he was very curios. He wants to know everything. He was also very good at school, and went after school to a university. There he studied Geography.

At about 1872 has he already finished his studying, then he must go to the army. He was a sportsman, because he did many different kinds of sport in his childhood and also when he was on the university. And because he was very athletic the army wants him to become a spy. So he started his spy-education. He was intelligent and so he fastly got to the top of the German spy-organisation. In the year 1893 he became the boss of that organisation, and in the year 1907 he went to Scotland and bought a big farmyard there, and built a big, luxurious house. He had the flying-license and so a year later he built a small airport and bought an aeroplane.

By the time he didn't work anymore, he let work for him by his men. His house was the spy-control-station of Germany in Great Britain. From there he could give each spy the instructions.

He was a very powerful man, and everyone, who had seen his eyes one time, couldn't forget them, because they were really strange. You can't describe the eyes, you must have seen them.

In the year 1832 he died in Scotland.
